Dr. Kerr was very much attached to the deceased, and will at the funeral today deliver a culogy upon the deceased, something he has never done before.

The members of the board of the Virginia Bible Society will meet in the study of the First Presbyterian church this morning to attend the funeral of Dr. Campbell. DECEASED'S LIFE-WORK.

At the request of Mrs. Campbell, Dr. Kerr yesterday prepared the following sketch of the deceased minister: "William Addison Campbell was born at Timber Ridge, in Backbridge county.

REV. WILLIAM A. CAMPBELL, D. D. Na. November 13, 1829. His parents, Na. November II, 1829. His parents, who were godly people, were Robert and Isabelle Paxton Campbell. He was carefully trained in the doctrines of the Presbytechan Church, and in the Holy Scriptures. On his 13th birthday he made his confession of Christ, and publicly assumed the vows of a Christian, and to these obligations few soldiers of the Cross have been so faithful.

"In his boyhood he studied in the school at Lexington, taught by Jacob Fuller. His collegiate training he received at Washington College, new Washington and Lee University, carrying off all the prizes in his class, and graduating as Master of Arts in 1832.

"So excellent was his scholarship, espe-

So excellent was his scholarship, espe cially in the department of mathematics, that he was given an assistant professorship, which position he held for two years. He graduated in divinity at Union Theological Seminary, Prince Edward county, in the class of 1855.

HIS FIRST CHARGE.

"His first charge was the pasterate of Mount Carmel and Genito Presbyterian churches, in Powhatan county. He was ordained at Mount Carmel church in 1855, and in his field he did noble work for sixteen years. So greatly was he believed and trusted, not only in his own denomination, but beyond it, that he was invited to hold services regularly in the Methodist church, Hobson's chapel, and in Imanuel Episcopal church.

"On September 29, 1877, he was married to Miss Virginia Eppes Dance, a Christian lady of rare character, who, to his last hour, was a helpment indeed, the companion, sympathetic and helpful, of his joys, and sorrows and of all ardicous labors, in the cause to which he conse-labors in the cause to which he conse-his joys and sorrows and of all arthous labors in the cause to which he conse-crated his life, and who survives to-day to mourn the loss of her noble consort.

"If it were proper to lift the veil which conceals from public view the most sa-cred things of life, there would be seen. In the tender relations of these two, no-thing but what was beautiful and pre-cious to a degree rarely found, even in the most blessed of homes. The chival-rous husband and the loyal wife ever rous husband and the loyal wife ever found in one another and in their chil-dren what their hearts most desired, next to the fayor of God. The romance of their love never waned in all the years of their life together.

PREACHED TO THE SOLDIERS. "While pastor in Powhatan, during the war between the States, Dr. Campbell was called frequently to preach to the arm about Richmond and elsewhere, which he did most acceptably, and with gracious results.

'From Powhatan he removed to Manchester, where he took charge of the Presbyterian church, now so prosperous, largely through his labors, then a small, struggling body, newly organized. Here, he toiled with untiring zeal for twelve years, and in Manchester, as well as years, and in Manchester, as well as in his former charge, there are now very many whom he brought to Christ, who still revere him as their father in the Gospel, and who now rise up to call him blessed. During his pastorate there

During his pastorate there he gave to the press a volume, entitled "Cemmentary on Mark," which is a valuable and able treatise on that Gospel, "While, a resident of Manchester he was greatly beloved by all classes; and, what is very unusual for ministers, who are not supposed to know much about business matters, he was called by his fellow-citizens to be a member of the City Council, to serve on the Committee on Streets, and to act as a member of the Board of Public Instruction.

He was called to make the estimates of hydraulic presto make the estimates of hydraulic pressure for the construction of the James-river dam, which still furnishes water for the manufactories that stand along the northern boundary of Manchester. His practical mind, his thorough knowledge of mathematics, and his rare judgment furnished him the qualifications requisite for all these undertakings.

CALLED TO EVANGELISTIC WORK

"It was the possession of these, among other gifts, which led to his being called from Manchester by the Presbytery of East Hanover to serve as evangelist for all its territory. For eight years he labored in season and out of season in building up the weaker churches, establishing new congregations, and in securing the erection of church edifices. The members of presbytery appreciate his great werk in this office, and they are ready to testify to his wisdom, tact, and wonderful success in strengthening and extending Presbyterianism and Christianity in Eastern Virginia from the Rappahamusek to North Carolina.
"In addition to his invaluable assistance in nurturing feeble congregations, there are now not less than ten congregations and fourteen new church buildings which stand as the result of his creative work. One of them—Campbell-Memorial—at Weems, on the Rappahannock, a grateful people insisted on naming in honor of this apostolic home missionary.

field, because there was no available material left, Dr. Campbell accepted, in February, 1894, the office of general agent of the Virginia Bible Society, to which he was called by the Board of Managers. After the death of the secretary, Mr. T. L. D. Walford, last winter, the duties of that office were also laid upon him. He expended incredible labors in his efforts to disseminate the Word of God throughout the State, putting the work of the society upon a solid basis, but his work was mearing its end, and a dutiful son had to be called to his father's help in the Bible cause.

HIS LAST ILLNESS.

"Dr. Campbell was taken sick in October, 1836, with a disorder which was destined to end his life. Though confined the greater part of his time to his house, he still labored with his pen, in writing expositions for the Earnest Worker, the Sunday-School Teachers' Magazine, in conducting by correspondence the business of the Bible Society, and in an enterprise very dear to his heart, the Universal Arbitration and Peace Association. Some of his writings for the Earnest Worker are still to be published, and the day before he died he gave directions for forwarding petitions for arbitration treaties through Dr. Darby, the sceretary in London, to the various governments of Europe. Dr. Campbell was chairman or the Executive Committee of the World's Peace Conference. the Executive Committee of the votal Peace Conference.

"The day before the end he prayed for each member of his family in turn, and gave directions to his family concerning all his affairs, in prospect of departure, with calm courage and in perparture, with calm courage and in perfect trust.

"His life was ebbing fast, but he regarded death with absolute composure. He had not experienced much bodily pair, his principal trouble was his inability to work, the inconvenience to which he might subject those who lovingly administered to him, and the loss they would sustain in his removal. He never seemed to have had a doubt in his religious life from childhood, and during these last days as he neared the verge his face was pollant with the light of the eternal sunrise.

Mayor Maurice dismissed promptly the charge against the three supposed poker players in his court yesterday morning. Mr. Morris, the complainant, was again absent, and a short investigation by the Mayor revealed the fact that the supposed poker combination was only a pleasure club. It is thought by many that Morris gave information upon which the warrant was sworn out because he had been refused admission to the club-rooms.

"Dr. Campbell held many places of trust and honor in the Church. He was at least five times a member of the General Assembly, was moderator of the Synod of Virginia, often moderator of presbytery, and was stated clerk of the Presbytery of East Hanover for twenty-seven years.

"The degree of D. D. was conferred upon him in 1888 by Washington and Lee University. When cleated moderator of the synod, the venerable Dr. Pryor, who nominated him, said he was 'the one man whom he would follow blindfold.' His brethren in the ministry, as well as the private members of our churches, reposed the most unbounded confidence in his judgment, while they all loved him for his piety, his talents, his learning, the grace as a writer, his soundness and power as' a preacher of the Gospel, his undaunted courage, and his gentle heart.

"The removal of the grand figure of the Rev. Dr. William A. Campbell leaves a vacancy it will be hard to fill in society, the Church, and the State."

The mother of Mary Graves, the little colored girl who ran away from her home last Thursday, is still at a loss to know where her child can be, and when seen by a Dispatch man yesterday afternoon showed marked signs of grief. Mary is an 11-year-old girl of ginger-cake color, and is the daughter of Ivison Graves, a negro well known in Manchester, and who lives in Mayo's addition, just outside of the city limits. Mary left home last Thursday afternoon when her mother threatened to whip her for not minding the children. Her father became alarmed when she did not return, and upon making a diligent search in Richmond spied her last Saturday afternoon at No. 514 north Thirteenth street. When Mary saw her father coming she ran out of the house. and was soon lost in the distance. The ecupants of the house mentioned, when questioned about the presence of the girl said that Mary came to the house last Thursday evening, and telling a pitiful tale gained admission. The police of Manchester and Richmond are on the lookout for the girl, but so far have failed
